Hello, let me introduce you Enrique and Antonia, they are a young couple who recently had to move to another country for reasons of work.

After a time, Enrique and Antonia had a baby called Peter. Because of the long distances between families, Enrique and Antonia decided to create for Peter a Facebook page in order to inform family and friends about the Peter’s efforts.

As time passed, Peter grew and as many children of this age was accustomed to tools like Internet, Skype, etc.

Peter was a very good and polite child. He will soon turn 12 and was very happy because his parents had promised him an iPad when he turned 12.

Dr. Salua Nassabay – https://saluanassabay.wordpress.com
Finally, on the day of his birthday, mom and dad gave Peter the iPad, with the condition to use it responsibly.

Peter was so glad, he gave his parents a big hug and went to his room with his new iPad. After playing some games, Peter decided to go to his Facebook page, where he told all his friends about his new gift and invited them home to celebrate his birthday.

But he did not know how to properly use Facebook. He did not realize that he made the invitation public and not only to his friends.

Few hours later, the invitation to his party counted already over 250 people who wanted to attend the party.
When his parents realized what had happened, they tried to inform the people that the party was to celebrate the 12 years of his son and was a private event; but it was too late, the general public was enthusiastic about the event.

Enrique and Antonia were very concerned, the guestlist was already counting more than 500 attendees and growing. Therefore they decided to inform the police to help them.

The police intervened and helped to solve the problem that Peter had got into; but not only Peter learned a lesson in security, privacy and intimacy.

Enrique and Antonia also learned to be more open to Peter's concerns, because although the Internet offers many positive things to young people, it can also become something negative if it is not managed well.